Leaning into the afternoons I cast my sad nets towards your oceanic eyes.

There is the highest blaze my solitude lengthens and flames its aims turning a drowning man's.

I send out red signals across your absent eyes that smell like the sea or the beach by a lighthouse.

You keep only darkness, my distant female from your regard sometimes the coast of dread emerges.

Leaning into the afternoons I fling my sad nets to that sea that thrashed by your oceanic eyes

The birds of night peck at the first stars that flash like my soul when I love you

The night gallops on its shadowy mare shedding blue tassels over the land

Comprehension: –

Suspicion amongst thoughts is like bat amongst birds, they ever fly by twilight. Certainly, they are to be repressed, or at the least well-guarded: for they cloud the mind, they lease friends. And they check with business, whereby business cannot go on currently. They dispose kings to tyranny, husbands to jealousy, wise men to irresolution and melancholy. They are defects, not in the heart, but in the brain, for they take place in the stoutest natures, as in the example of Henry the seventh of England. There was not a more suspicious man, nor a more stout. And in such a composition they do small hurt. For commonly they are not admitted. But with examination, whether they be likely or not. But in fearful natures they gain ground too fast. There is nothing that makes a man suspect much, more than to know little, and therefore men should remedy suspicion by procuring to know more, and not to keep their suspicions in smother. What would men have? Do they not think they will have their own ends, and be truer to themselves than to them? Therefore, there is no better way to moderate suspicions, than to account upon such suspicions as true, and yet to bridle them as false. For so far, a man ought to make use of suspicions, as to provide, as if that should true that he suspects, yet it may do him no hurt. Suspicions that the mind of itself gathers are but buzzes, but suspicions, that are artificially nourished, and put into men's heads by the tales and whisperings of other, have strings. Certainly, the best mean to clear the way in this same wood of suspicion, is frankly to communicate them with the party that he suspects. For thereby he shall be sure to know more of the truth of them than he did before, and withal shall make that party more circumspect not to give further cease of suspicion. But this would not be done to men of base natures, for they, if they find themselves once suspected, will never be true. The situation says, suspicion gives license to faith, as if suspicion did give a passport to faith but it ought rather to kindle it to discharge itself.

Q. 96) Which among the following is true in the context of given paragraph?

- A) Henry the Seventh ruled ruthlessly for long time
- B) Suspicion is a stepping stone to faith
- C) Suspicion kills the layer of human spirit
- D) Rulers should suppress suspicion of all forms.
